DETAILED ACTION

1. The reply filed February 19, 2008, has been received and entered. Claims 1-38 are pending.

Response to Amendments / Arguments

2. The objection to claims 1, 21, and 38 is withdrawn in view of applicant's amendments.
3. Applicant's arguments filed February 19, 2008, regarding the rejection of claims 21-37 under 35 U.S.C. § 101, have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The examiner agrees that the means-plus-function claims are to be interpreted under 35 U.S.C. § 112, 6th paragraph. However, upon reviewing the specification for the structures corresponding to the recited functions, it is clear that in addition to the hardware structures that applicant has emphasized, (Remarks 12), software structures are recited in the alternative. Specifically, paragraph 12 of the specification recites:

In accordance with the present invention, the components, process steps, and/or data structures may be implemented using various types of operating systems, computer platforms, computer programs, and/or general purpose machines. In addition, those of ordinary skill in the art will recognize that devices of a less general purpose nature, such as hardwired devices, field programmable gate arrays (FPGAs), application specific integrated circuits (ASICs), or the like may also be used without departing from the scope and spirit of the inventive concepts disclosed herein.

(Specification at paragraph [0012] (emphasis added).) Since claims 21-37 recite no other structures than the means-plus-function elements, and the specification describes such means as including software structures, the rejection under § 101 is maintained. Upon further review, Claims 18-20 are also rejected under § 101, as set forth below.

4. Applicant's arguments, see pp. 13-20, filed February 19, 2008, with respect to the rejection of claims 1-38 under 35 U.S.C. § 102(a) have been fully considered and are persuasive. The rejection of claims 1-38 under 35 U.S.C. § 102(a) has been withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

5. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

6. Claims 18-37 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Descriptive material can be characterized as either "functional descriptive material" or "nonfunctional descriptive material." In this context, "functional descriptive material" consists of data structures and computer programs which impart functionality when employed as a computer component. (The definition of "data structure" is "a physical or logical relationship among data elements, designed to support specific data manipulation functions." The New IEEE Standard Dictionary of Electrical and Electronics Terms 308 (5th ed. 1993).) "Nonfunctional descriptive material" includes but is not limited to music, literary works and a compilation or mere arrangement of data. Both types of "descriptive material" are nonstatutory when claimed as descriptive material per se. In re Warmerdam, 33 F.3d 1354, 1361, 31 USPQ2d 1754, 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory).

Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer-readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer. See, e.g., In re Warmerdam, 33 F.3d 1354, 1361, 31 USPQ2d 1754, 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory). Such claimed data structures do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory.

Similarly, computer programs claimed as computer listings per se, i.e., the descriptions or expressions of the programs, are not physical "things." They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not "acts" being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer-readable medium encoded with a computer program is a computer element which defines structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and the rest of the computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory. See In re Lowry, 32 F.3d 1579, 1583-84, 32 USPQ2d 1031, 1035.

Claim 18-37 recite an "apparatus" comprising a series of elements that can be reasonably interpreted (including interpretation of claims 21-37 under 35 U.S.C. § 112, sixth paragraph) as software, per se. The claims do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the software elements and a computer that would permit the described functionality to be realized when the software is employed as a computer component. Accordingly, claims 18-37 appear to merely set forth functional descriptive material per se, which is nonstatutory.
